Tanabata celebrations return at Way Out West Festival for Children

After last year's sell-out success, The Japan Foundation, Sydney is proud to support a new line-up of Tanabata workshops for children featuring Japanese contemporary artist Chaco Kato. The workshops will return on a larger scale alongside an exciting line-up of free cultural programs dedicated to children and families as part of the Way Out West (WOW) Festival For Children (9-12 July 2014, Casula Powerhouse Arts Centre).

Tanabata is the name of Japan's star festival. The festival celebrates the tale of star lovers Orihime and Hikoboshi, who became separated by the Milky Way and can only meet once a year on 7 July ('Tanabata' literally means 'the evening of the seventh').

At the workshops, children and parents from Sydney's West will participate in Tanabata celebrations—many for the first time—by making traditional paper-art decorations and writing their heart-felt wishes on pieces of decorative paper called tanzaku. Their handmade creations will adorn a site-specific art installation developed by Chaco Kato.

To give the children an immersive experience, each workshop session will start with a live storytelling where participants hear the Tanabata story as re-interpreted by Art Waku Waku's Kathryn Hunyor, and illustrated by Haline Ly (Whale Design Co.). Kathryn explains, 'Tanabata is a traditional Japanese celebration, but stories like these have universal appeal and can be enjoyed by everyone.'

The inclusion of Tanabata celebrations in this year's WOW festival pays homage to Liverpool's sister-city relationship with Toda, a city near Tokyo in Japan.

The Japan Foundation, Sydney Director Nao Endo says, 'We're proud to support Tanabata workshops within the Way Out West Festival for Children program this year. This first collaboration with Casula Powerhouse is an exciting opportunity to develop new relationships.'

'The sharing of our stories is essentially the core of cultural exchange and we're delighted to be able to do this in Western Sydney, which has such a strong history of cultural exchange already.'

To complete the experience, the WOW Festival will present free screenings of anime films Ponyo and My Neighbour Totoro, supported by the Japan Foundation, Sydney and the Japanese Film Festival.

All events are free, bookings essential.
